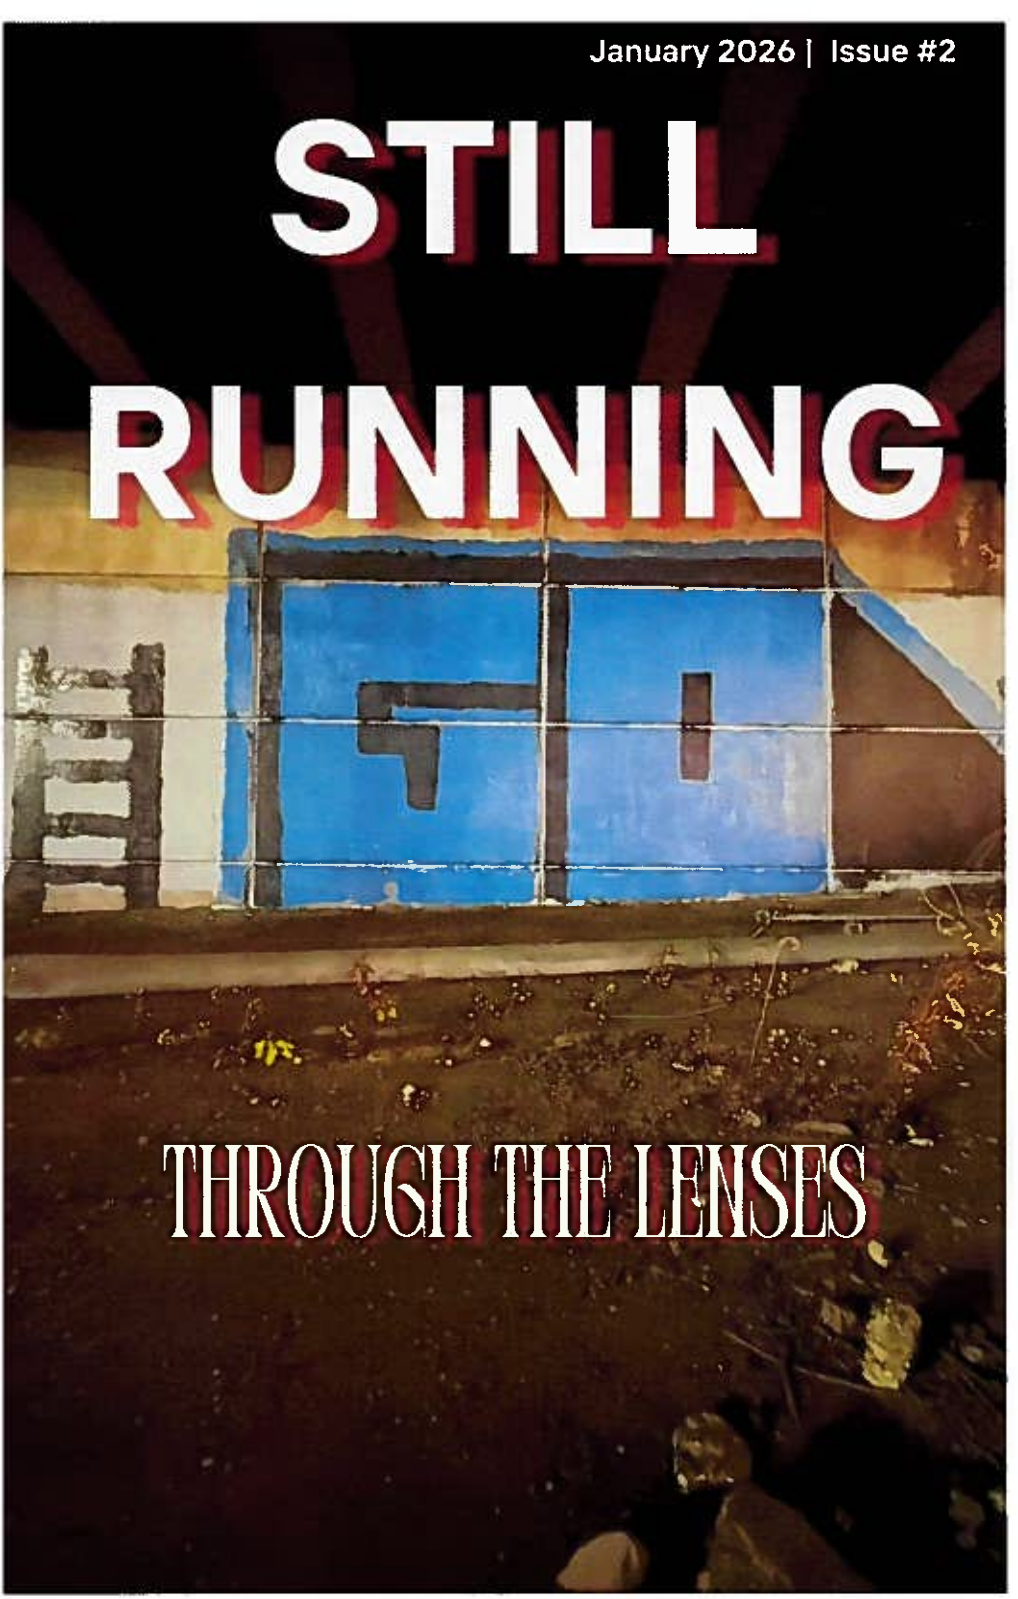
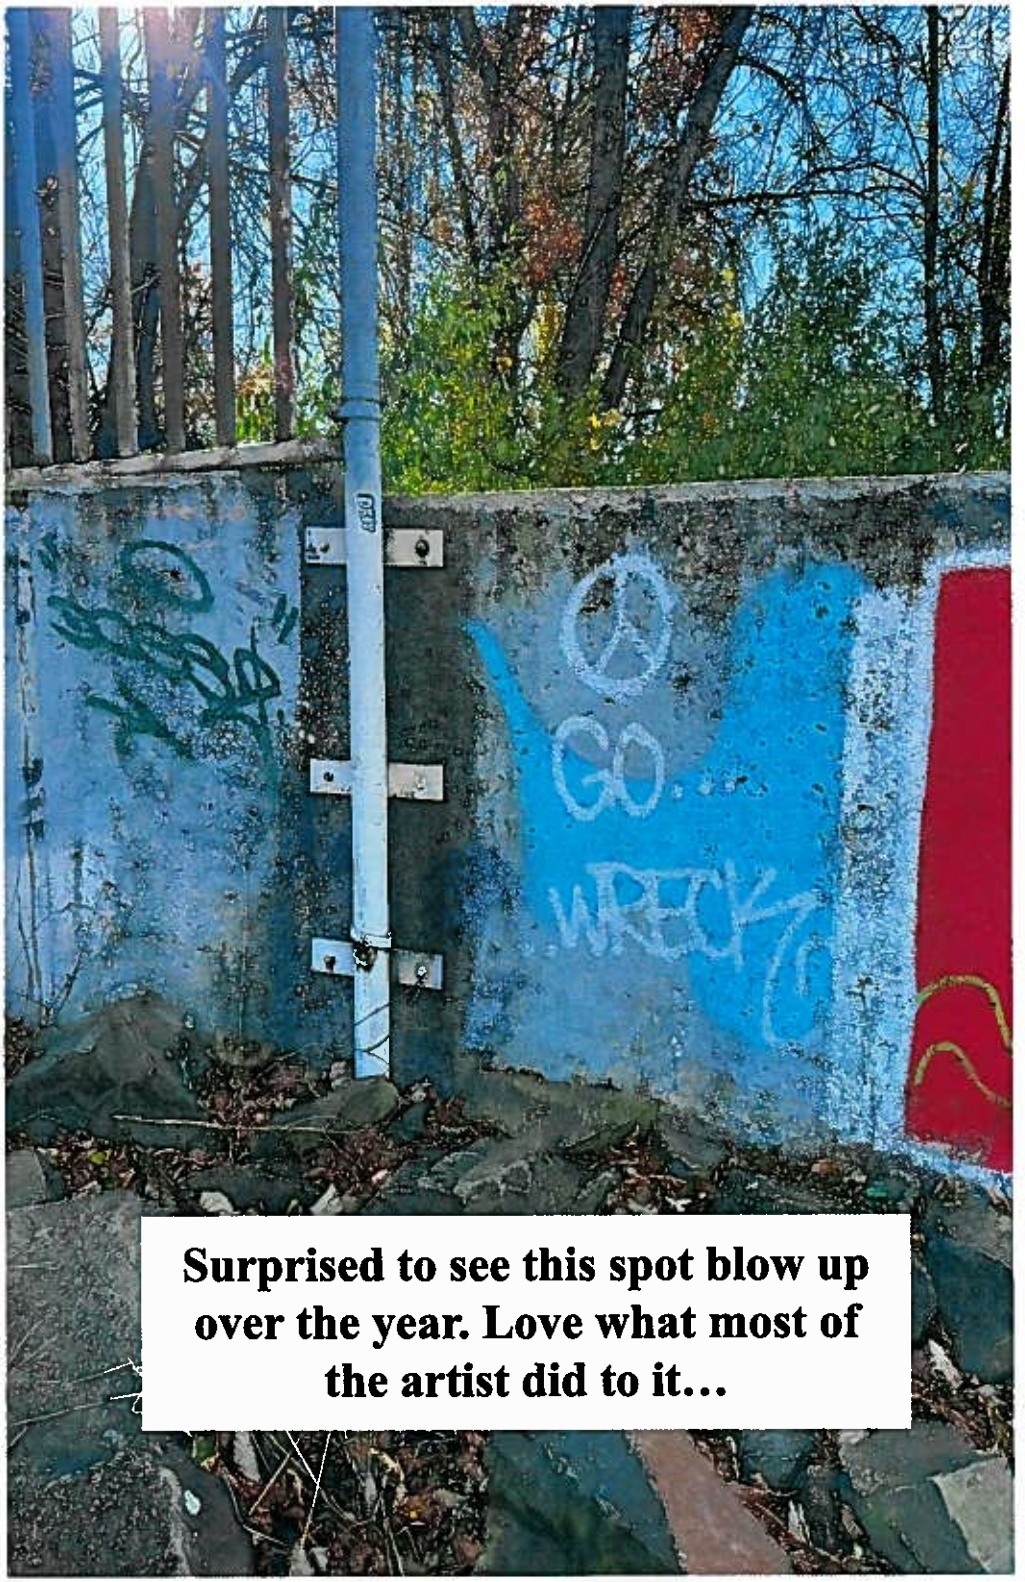
STILL RUNNING



THROUGH THE LENSES

This wall came up after I had a long time running box letter throwie here. It was running almost all of 2025 until a few other writers wrote next to me. The owners of the property cleaned it up almost a week later. I noticed it the first night & knew I had to take as much space as I could so no one would write next to me. Ran for a few months solo. Still running now



Surprised to see this spot blow up over the year. Love what most of the artist did to it…

I took this picture from my car. I knew this wouldn't stay up for long & I wanted to capture the moment. It gave me a good chuckle to see

Love long walks on the highway at night. Something calming about the long stretches of open road dimly lit by failing lamp posts

Shoutout to Uzer, this man is the bando king! Always has the best spots that are super low key & bare walls. Always a fun adventure heading over that way

People will complain about the rules of graffiti online but do things like this in real life. Everyone knows if you're going to cross someone out, at least leave a name

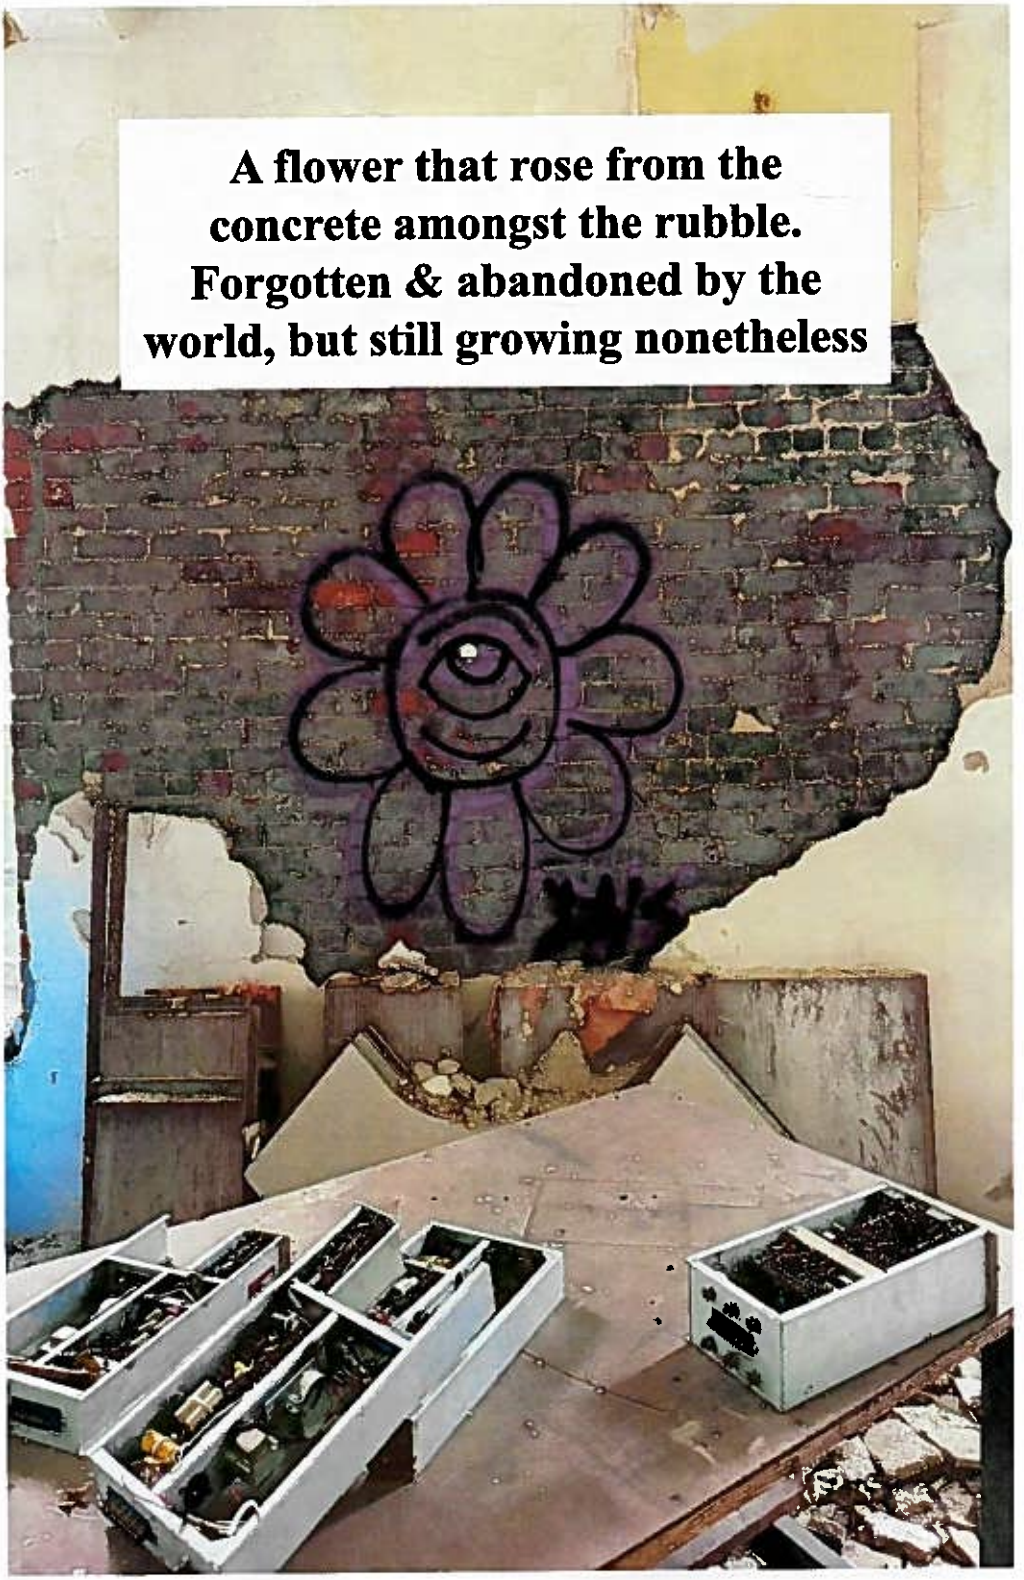
The name of the game is getting up. From stickers to pieces, everywhere I go I find time to capture the moment. My memory is short, but my camera roll is long. Every picture is from an adventure I've taken, whether alone or with others, painting & traveling is a huge part of enjoying life. I want to look back at my time with praise & love, instead of wishing I had done something. Life is short, cherish it the best you can. Big shoutout to all of the world's vandals & artists. Life would be bland, grey, & boring without you.



A flower that rose from the concrete amongst the rubble. Forgotten & abandoned by the world, but still growing nonetheless

Thank you for Viewing!

If you're ever interested in submitting pictures or videos for consideration for the next zine, send them over to me! I love collaborating with other people to give them a space for ideas & concepts. New zines coming soon. Peace & love from the 413
